

NARROW ESCAPE.

Mrs. Solomon Kays Meets With Frightful Accident—Clothing Catches On Fire.

On last Sunday while preparing dinner Mrs. Solomon Kays, of Pleasant Grove neighborhood, came near meeting her death in a most frightful manner. Her clothing caught fire from the stove, and as no one was present she started to run, but remembering that this was the very thing she ought not to do, she quickly ran into the bed room and wrapped some heavy comforts about herself, and by displaying this presence of mind she saved her life. However, Mrs. Kays was quite severely burned from which she is now suffering much pain, but it is not believed her wounds are dangerous. Dr. Hyatt was called and administered to the sufferer, and he reports her as doing well at present.

Died In Texas.

News was received here last Saturday of the death of Capt. Alex Smith at Waco, Tex., he having died Tuesday, January 3. Capt. Smith resided in Springfield about twenty-five years ago, and was a brother of Mrs. Mary Nee, of this place, and Mrs. Jane Logsdon, of Fenwick, this county. Capt. Smith served as a Captain in the Union army, and was noted for his bravery and courage. He was sixty-nine years old and was a devout member of the Catholic church. He is remembered by some of the older citizens here who will regret to learn of his death.

APPOINTED

As Guard At Frankfort Penitentiary, Is Mr. R. H. Mullican.

The many friends of Mr. R. H. Mullican will be glad to learn that he has been appointed guard at the Frankfort penitentiary, and will leave tomorrow afternoon to begin his duties. The position is a good one and Mr. Mullican is to be congratulated upon receiving the position. Representative W. D. Claybrooke was instrumental in securing the appointment. This makes the second appointment of this nature that Mr. Claybrooke has landed for Washington county, he having secured a like position for Mr. A. M. Ferrell, of Mackville. There are very few counties in the State from which there have been more than one guard appointed.

Peyton Briggs has moved his family to their home at Polin.

Mrs. Wesley Parish sustained a painful injury of the wrist last week by falling.

Sam Sutherland visited Roscoe Yeager.

A number of our girl and boys left last week for their respective schools: Misses Eva Sutherland, for Nicholasburg; Sallie Mae Williams, for Millersburg; and Margie Bette, for Louisville. Messrs. Marvin Williams and Lawrence Simpson, for Wilmore, and Clifton Taylor for Bardonia.

Mrs. Ella Turney has returned to her home in Lexington.

Mrs. Cardwell, of Campbellsville, Secretary of the Royal Neighbors Society, Shelbyville district, delivered an interesting paper in the interest of the work Sunday. A society was organized here and will meet Jan. 21 at the home of Mrs. Sue Williams, the president. This is indeed a noble work and demands the willing and hearty cooperation of all.

For His Creditors.

Lawrenceburg, Ky., Jan. 6.—W. P. Bell, proprietor of the Royal Neighbors restaurant, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The schedule of liabilities and assets has not been filed.

Mr. Bell was in the grocery business here five or six years ago, and his many friends will be sorry to hear of his financial failure.

Bail is denied Nan Patterson, the former actress, pending a new trial on the charge of murdering Caesar Young.

Dwelling Burned.

The dwelling house of T. C. Montgomery, about nine miles from town, on the Springfield and Polin pike, was destroyed by fire last Tuesday afternoon about 3 o'clock. The origin of the fire is unknown, as the family were away from home at the time, but it is supposed that it caught from a fireplace, as a large back-log was placed upon the fire before Mr. Montgomery's family left home. The building was a two-story log and was one of the oldest in the county. There was no insurance on the house or contents and the loss is almost total. Some of the kitchen furniture was saved, but with this exception everything in the building was destroyed. Not even the clothing of the family was saved. The loss is quite a severe one for Mr. Montgomery, and it is to be hoped that his friends will assist him in replacing some of his losses.

LOOKS BRIGHT

For The Burley Tobacco Growers' Company.

The following is from the Louisville Times of Jan. 6:

W. B. Hawkins, of Lexington, representing the Burley tobacco growers of Kentucky, and State Insurance Commissioner Henry R. Hewitt, who arrived here yesterday, left this morning for New York city. They are endeavoring to raise sufficient capital to carry the Growers' Independent Association which is waging war on the trust. The aim of the growers is to market their own product and to handle their own tobacco. It will require much money to do this as an amount sufficient to buy the output will be necessary. Mr. Hawkins said that he secured stock subscriptions amounting to $500,000 in Cincinnati, $200,000 has been taken in Louisville, and some elsewhere in the State. An effort is now being made to induce New York capitalists to take the remaining and biggest end of the proposition.

Mr. Hawkins said considerable over the million dollars would have to be secured at once and that if all was not in sight by Monday the whole scheme would be abandoned. Mr. Hawkins said the Growers of Kentucky were pleased over the steps which have been taken by the Department of Justice and Commerce and Labor to investigate the operations of the tobacco trust. He says action of some sort is necessary to protect the growers. Representative Trimble has been notified by Mr. Hawkins that a New York Trust Company has agreed to furnish any amount of money up to ten million dollars to finance the Kentucky growers' organization. Mr. Hawkins says for the first time he believes the Kentucky Tobacco Growers' Association is a certainty.

The Sun has been unable to learn anything of a definite nature as to Mr. Hawkins' success, but if the above from the Times is true it looks very much like the Growers' Co. is meeting with success.

To-day at noon Mr. W. A. Clements received a telephone message from Lexington, stating that Mr. Hawkins is still in New York at work upon the matter, and that the chances are that the Growers Company will be organized with an abundance of capital with which to handle the crop.

FOUND DEAD

By Two Drummers Was Harvey Bridges.—Hogs Were Eating On Body When Discovered

As Messrs. H. Wilm and Wm. Lyons, two drummers, were going from Lerrymac, Marion county, to Campbellsville, on last Tuesday, their attention was attracted by some hogs in a near-by field eating upon something that resembled the body of a man or a boy. They at once made an investigation and were horror-stricken to find the mangled body of a boy, which proved to be that of Harvey Bridges. It was learned that he had gone out hunting that morning, and the supposition is that the gun was accidentally discharged, a load of shot taking effect in his neck and the left side of his head. He and his mother were from Iowa and were in Taylor county on a visit.

OTHER ACCIDENTS.

The Maple correspondent to The La Rue County Herald says: Master Turner Horde, son of the widow Richard Horde, happened to a "probably fatal" accident last week. He filled the brass part of a breech loading shotgun bulk with powder, then put a match head in it and turned it over on a block of wood and struck it with an axe. The match head set the powder afire and it exploded, blowing the top of the bulk into the boy's bowels. The doctors have never located it yet. They say there is no chance for his recovery.

Master Jefferson Morris, son of Wm. Morris, happened to a serious accident a few days ago. He was fooling with a breech loading shotgun when it went off and shot him through the foot. The doctors say his foot will have to be amputated.

It Often Occurs.

(Marion Falcon.)
Again we chronicle and attack on the accommodation train. Saturday evening as this train passed Smith's Switch near Boston a large rock crashed through one of the windows, but fortunately it struck the shutter on the inside and no one was injured. It had the effect, however, of having each blind drawn where a passenger happened to be sitting. We would suggest that it would be a good idea for the L. & N. to have special steel caps with the windows covered with screens in order to protect their passengers on this run.

Rains-Wright.

(Danville News.)
Miss Etta Lee Rains and Mr. T. H. Wright were married at the home of Dr. E. H. Pierce last Tuesday evening at eight o'clock. The wedding was very quiet, only a few immediate friends being present. Mrs. Wright has been with Lyons & Nichols for nine years as one of the most efficient employees. Mr. Wright has for some time been with the Danville Ice & Coal Co., as book-keeper. He is a man of sterling qualities that make him invaluable to any one securing his services. Both of them were handsomely remembered by their respective employers. They will live on Third street.

The groom is a grandson of Judge McIntire, deceased, who was County Judge of this county, and is well known here. Washington county friends extend congratulations.

Death of Mrs. Hinton.

Mrs. Sallie Hinton died at the home of her son, about one mile from Fredericktown Tuesday morning, January 2, at 5:30. Death had been expected for some time, and came as no surprise, nevertheless the shock was great to those who were watching at the bedside, and to the sorrow-stricken children and loved ones many friends extend condolence.

Mrs. Hinton was seventy-eight years old and was a devout member of the Catholic church, from which church funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Father Pietras, on the 4th, at 9 a. m., and the remains were interred in St. Rose cemetery.

Mrs. Hinton was the mother of eleven children, but only six of them are living.

Mrs. Hinton was an exceptionally good woman and her death is not only mourned by her family but by hundreds of people who had learned to love her by reason of her beautiful life.

S. E. HALL.

Bishop Spalding Paralyzed.

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 6.—Bishop John L. Spalding is at his residence on North Madison Avenue, suffering from a severe paralytic stroke which attacked him this afternoon.

The entire left side of the bishop is affected, and for several hours after the stroke he was unable to speak. Leeches applied to his head resulted in bringing back, in a measure, his speech, and he has been able to converse with those who have been with him.

The reverend bishop is 65 years of age, and while he has been in fair health practically all his life, his age tends to add to the fear of his friends for another and more serious attack.

Shocking Accident.

The Marion Falcon says: A most shocking and sad accident happened at Maywood, five miles South of Stanford, Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock, when the local freight train struck and instantly killed Jesse Hobson, the eighty-year-old son of Mr. Will Hobson, manager of the Royer Wheel Co., at this place.

Final agreements have been made for the consolidation of the Lafayette National and First National Banks of Cincinnati.

Appointed Magistrate.

Mr. J. W. Gordon has been appointed Magistrate in Magisterial district No. 5, he having received his commission from Gov. Beckham Monday. Mr. Gordon is appointed to fill the unexpired term of Mr. J. R. Mayes, who recently resigned to go South on account of his daughter's health. Mr. Gordon will unquestionably make the county a good officer, and we predict that he will at all times be found working for the best interests of the county.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

Prints Statement And Gives Some Interesting Figures.

The First National Bank held its annual stockholders' meeting yesterday for the election of directors. The board as elected is Judge B. L. Litsey, Hon. John W. Lewis, Messrs. Litsey Green, F. M. Campbell, R. H. Eiden, H. M. Grundy and Esquire John O. Polin. The only change from the old directory being the election of J. O. Polin to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John W. Kelly. This is a strong body of men, all of whom have been successful, both in their own business affairs and in the management of the bank. This old and solid institution, known as the "Old Bank," was organized as a National Bank in the year 1871, since which time it has paid regular semi-annual dividends to its stockholders amounting to over $310,000, or over six times its present capital. A detailed statement of its condition appears in this issue of The Sun.

Just Keep On Goin' On.

If the day looks kind gloomy,
An' your chances kinder slim;
If the situation's puzzlin'
An' the prospects awful grim,
And perplexities keep pressin'
Till all hope is nearly gone,
Fuss 'bout an' grit your teeth,
An' keep on keepin' on,
Fussin' never wins a fight,
An' frettin' never pays;
There ain't no good of broodin' in
These pessimistic ways.
Smile just kinder cheerfully
When hope is nearly gone,
An' bristle up, an' grit your teeth,
An' keep on keepin' on,
There ain't no use in growlin'
An' grumblin' all the time
When music's ringin' everywhere
An' everything's a rhyme.
Just keep on smilin' cheerfully
If hope is nearly gone,
An' bristle up, an' grit your teeth,
An' keep on keepin' on.

NEEDLESS AGONY.

You may go ahead doctoring rheumatism and kidney disease all your young life and when old age comes you are still its victim.

Now just stop a moment and consider. What causes rheumatism and kidney disease? The impure state of the blood. Why not start at the foundation and build from that? Do not treat each ache and pain separately. You will never get permanent results by so doing, besides it is a big expense, a great waste of time, and you suffer much needless pain.

Build up your blood. When healthy red blood flows through the veins rheumatism and kidney disease disappear. We are now prepared to offer you a tonic which takes right hold of a delicate constitution and revolutionizes it in a remarkably short time, at a remarkably low price.

Fin-Tone. It replenishes vitality, cures rheumatism, backache and kidney disease. Gives health and strength. It makes you well.

LAST TERM.

Congressman Smith Will Not Again Run for Congress—Out of Race for United States Senator.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Representative Smith, of the Fourth Kentucky district, announced to friends at the Capitol today that he would not be a candidate against Senator Blackburn in the forthcoming senatorial contest, and also added that he would not be a candidate to succeed himself in the House. "When I have concluded the term for which I was elected," said Representative Smith, "I will have served ten years in Congress. It is a longer period than any other man ever served from the district, and I feel that I should step out and allow some other man to have the place. I deeply appreciate the honor which has been conferred upon me, and the requests of my friends with whom I have discussed the matter, that I again make the race. I have decided, however, not to again become a candidate."

It is expected that there will be a lively race for Mr. Smith's place in the House. The district contains some pretty good congressional timber, and there will likely be five or six candidates to announce themselves at an early date. Mr. Smith's announcement came rather in the nature of a surprise here. He is the oldest member in point of service in the House from Kentucky, and has done a great deal in forwarding the interests of the State and his district in Congress. It is understood that he would have had no opposition for another term. As a member of the Judiciary Committee, Mr. Smith has taken high rank in the House, and has always been given a part in the most important work coming before that committee.

A Judge's Cure For Lynching.

Judge John L. Hopkins, formerly of the superior court of Georgia, submits to the people of that state, through the Atlanta Constitution, some seemingly valuable suggestions looking toward the suppression of lynching. Judge Hopkins demonstrated his right to advise his people in the troubled days after the civil war, when, as the Constitution says, his firmness, courage and fidelity to the highest judicial dignity brought order and peace out of confusion and lawlessness. The suggestions of such a man must carry great weight. The following are Judge Hopkins' propositions:

That the state be given the right of changing the venue in all cases, civil and criminal, where the opposing party has such right.

That when a human life is taken by what is known as lynching, if a prosecution and conviction do not occur within a limited time, the county in which the lynching occurred shall be made liable to a fine of $10,000, which shall go to the common school fund.

That a revision of the criminal procedure be made with the view of procuring as speedily a trial of all criminals, embracing lynchers as well, as may be consistent with the ends of justice.

The talk about the "law's delay" as an excuse for lynching, Judge Hopkins asserts, is in the main without true foundation. It is as old as Solomon, who said, "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil."

The Constitution, commenting favorably upon the Judge's proposed remedy, expresses the opinion that the great majority of the citizens of Georgia are heartily opposed to all forms of lynching and that whatever is calculated to cure this evil will have their unqualified support.

The Indiana House of Representatives unseated two Democratic members from the Fort Wayne district and seated the Republican contestants.

Our Fashion Letter.

Something Interesting For Our Women Readers.

BY JUDIC CHOLLET.

For Young Girls.

This very pretty little frock is made of a wool material which is dark red in color, barred with dark green and trimmed with handings of dark green velvet, the yoke and sleeves being of ecru lace. The dress is closed at the back invisibly beneath the bow plait of the waist and between the center plaits of the skirt. The bertha, which outlines the waist, gives the broad shoulder line of fashion, and the sleeves show the new cuffs. The quantity of material required for a girl twelve years of age is seven yards twenty-seven or four and three-quarter yards forty-four inches wide, with three-quarters of a yard of all over lace.

Cashmere Popular.

Cashmere is back with a greater prestige than ever. It has many qualities that adapt it to the present fashion; a highly finished surface, supple and a long range of colors—American Telt, the pretty greens, of which bronze, almond and lichen are most popular; all the browns, including the favorite mode and cinnamon; the blues, with Parsifal in the lead, and the purple, dahlia and copper shades. In the delicate pale tones black velvet suggests the most pleasing trimming, especially when Persian embroidery is introduced and lace is lavishly used.

Smart Accessories.

Among the dress accessories are little waistcoats of silk, ornate velvet, vesting, cloth or leather, the last especially being out of order. They are precise and severe in finish, though all sorts of devices are wrought upon them in hand needlework, jet and even in beads. The smartest examples are to be worn with the open coats, of which there is a great variety.

The Petticoat.

While the silk petticoat is included in nearly every wardrobe, there are those who prefer one more substantial for ordinary wear, and nothing is quite so well suited to this purpose as the heavy English moltons, which are procurable in a variety of colors. If preferred, there may be a buttoned on silk flounce, though this is by no means essential to its good style.

A Useful Apron.

An attractive design for a work apron is here pictured and will prove useful to the woman who does fancy work. The pockets will be found convenient for holding the sewing, mending, wools or embroidery silks. The deep frill is divided into sections to form the pockets, and the sections are held in place by tape, ribbon or beading attached to the apron. Pongee, linen, baland and cross barred muslin are all suitable materials to use, and two yards of thirty-six inch material will be required for making.

Many Shapes In Sleeves.

Sleeves are in many cases tight to the elbow, resembling the "mutton leg" of several years ago, and some reach just to the elbow with large turn back cuffs and narrow lace frills, but the fullness is always at the top or well above the elbow. With the three-quarter sleeves long gloves are worn.

ALL THREE PAPERS ONE YEAR

One Year's Reading!

And the very best, too, for only $1.40. They are THE BEST. That expresses it precisely! You know what The Sun is; you know what the Weekly Courier-Journal is. Let us tell you what Farm and Fireside is:

FARM AND FIRESIDE is issued twice a month, twenty-four numbers a year, and has from twenty to thirty-two large pages each issue; it is profusely illustrated with half-tones. It is the best farm and home journal in America. Thousands of dollars are expended annually for expert advice for the farmer, dairyman, stockraiser, poultryman, fruit-grower and gardener. It has departments for the housewife, fashion pages, patterns, good stories, puzzles; it furnishes a lawyer and a doctor, wit and humor columns, and a young people's department.

FIERCE FLAMES.

Record Printing Co.'s Plant and Log Tenement Destroyed by Fire (Bartonsville Standard.)

The building and entire plant of the Record Printing Company were destroyed by fire last Tuesday night. A large tenement house occupied by several families of colored people and adjoining the Record office, also went up in smoke. This house was of logs weather-boarded.

The fire, which is said to have had its origin in the Record office, was then under considerable headway.

The Smith building, which is occupied by The Standard, the postoffice and others, is situated only a few yards from the source of the fire, and to save this the efforts of the fire company were chiefly directed, as had the flames gained a headway upon it, the entire business portion of the town would have been jeopardized. The building caught in several places a number of times, but were as quickly extinguished by the brave firemen.

Had it not been for the water works system, which, fortunately, was in fine working order, thousands of dollars' worth of property would have undoubtedly been destroyed.

Those who fought the fire worked valiantly, and to them and the water-works system is due the fact that Bartonsville's most valuable property is not now in ashes.

The fire is said to have originated in the rear of the Record office, but from what source seems to be altogether unknown.

The building, we understand, was insured for $1,000; the material for $1,000. The log tenement house was the property of Messrs. Sisco and Rosenham and was valued at about $800. It was a complete loss, as it was not insured.

Made Himself Solid.

(Anderson News.)

Mr. Joe Searcy, the popular mail carrier on Route No. 2, succeeded in making himself solid with his youthful patrons on the day before Christmas. Having noticed that there were some little folks on his route who might be overlooked by Santa Claus, he laid in a supply of oranges, bananas and candies and played Santa Claus himself for their benefit. Joe made the little fellows happy by his gifts, and they voted him a genuine good fellow for his thoughtfulness.

State Revenue Agent Harrison has filed suit against Anderson county distillers for taxes aggregating $278,000.

Two Men Killed.

Elizabethtown, Ky., Jan. 5.—The explosion of the boiler at the sawmill of James Bailey, three miles south of this town, resulted in the death of James Bailey and James Melton. The boiler and engine were blown a considerable distance in the woods. The body of Melton was hurled thirty feet against a pile of lumber, which almost mashed it into a pulp. The body of Bailey was blown about fifty yards from the site of the mill. The mill was a complete wreck.

The Sparrow And The Owl.

LITTLE BIRDS WITH BIG EYES AND OPEN EARS.

THE SPARROW.

The Sparrow recently directed a half dozen letters to as many young ladies in Springfield, asking these questions: "What constitutes your ideal man? Or do you look upon a single young man acquaintance as a hero?" I promised not to print names to letters, but stated that I desired letters for publication. I also promised to give to the young lady sending in the best answer a nice feather duster and a broom as a prize. Four of the six have answered, and I print the letters below:

Springfield, Ky., Jan. 2.—The Sparrow: Of course I know what constitutes an ideal man. Nearly all nicely dressed, good-looking fellows are ideal men, but, certainly, I only have one hero. My hero is a young man, about five feet high, weight about one hundred and fifteen pounds. Dark eyes and curly hair; has moderate size foot and very nice size hand. He smiles a great deal and is always in a good humor. He smokes cigarettes—about ten a day; he inhales nicely and many a time I have seen him blow a stream of smoke clear across the room, something I am told is very hard to do. He can also make nice rings—I mean nice rings of smoke, and really I think it is nice to watch him smoke. One day when we were out walking he deliberately walked up to an old, horrid snake and hit it with a long plank. He missed the snake and it ran at both of us. Then it was that he displayed his wonderful presence of mind by climbing up a tree and telling me to climb on the top of the fence. This we did. An old black man came by and my hero told him to kill the snake and he would give him a dime next day. I will close by saying that I think he is real nice.

Yours in haste, Miss A. B. C.

o o o

Springfield, Ky., Jan. 5.—The Sparrow: Your note received. I will gladly answer the questions you ask. In fact I only recently wrote a letter to a girl friend of mine along the same line and I feel that I am perfectly competent to fully handle the subject. As to what constitutes my ideal man, this will be discussed along with my hero for he is one and the same. My hero is about six feet two inches high, weight about one hundred and fifty pounds. Of course he wears a large shoe, but his foot doesn't look badly. He has a slight stoop in the shoulders, but he is very intellectual, and I firmly believe he could have been elected to the legislature had he applied himself. He came near going to the Spanish-American war and I am sometimes sorry that he didn't go, for I am sure he would have "extinguished" himself. [The Sparrow takes the liberty to quote "extinguished," for it seems that a mistake has been made.] He smokes a cob pipe, and, when he is mad, I am told he swears, but, nevertheless, he is nice. If he could have the opportunities that some men have he would be a great man in the world. I will close by asking you to excuse this puffishly horrid writing.

Miss X. Y. Z.

o o o

Springfield, Ky., Jan. 4.—The Sparrow: I am delighted to answer the questions you ask. Oh, I know so many ideal men, and they are all so delightful, so charming, so perfectly divine! From the lot I cannot select a single one who, in my estimation, towers above the other. But as to the hero—that's a different matter, you know. My hero is the nicest, cutest, most sublime hero in all the world. And I am not the only girl that thinks so, either. His deeds of heroism are wonderful! He hasn't smoked a cigarette since the first of January, and one day when an alarm of fire was given I noticed that he was the bravest, most daring man in all the crowd. It was perfectly lovely and inspiring to see him rescuing the feather beds from the horrid flames. And again, one day when a mad dog passed through town, he was the first to shoulder his gun and march away in search of the perfectly awful dog, and had it not been that the dog died in a fit he would have killed it, for he was just two miles behind it. He comes by his bravery and courage honestly, for his father was a gallant member of the Home Guards during the Civil War. I know that he is a perfect giant, physically, and a man once told him that he would have made a name had he devoted his attention to prize-fighting. One day when he was at our house he caught a mouse by the tail and quickly threw it out the window. Oh, he is just too lovely for anything. Yours in haste, P. D. Q.

Springfield, Ky., Jan. 6.—The Sparrow: I shall endeavor to answer your questions. As to ideal men, I know but few, if any. You must know that ideals, it matters not of what nature, are very few. But I do know a hero, though I do not lay any claim to him, more than that he is my very dear friend. He is a big-hearted young fellow, broad-minded, generous, with a soul o'erflowing with a desire to befriend somebody. He is not quite so religious as he ought to be, perhaps, but he is charitable to a pretty degree. He is devoted to his mother, and I will wager my ring that he has never given his father a cross word. He is a busy man—and honest in every detail—and through his own labor has accumulated several thousand dollars. This, in a sense, I consider heroism, but it may not be in the fuller meaning of the word. Though the ugly scar he has across his left cheek is a little memento to a bit of his courage. He checked a runaway horse one day and was thrown violently against a sharp curb, receiving a severe cut. But when he was restored to consciousness he asked: "Was the woman or little child hurt?" One day he whipped three horrid men for swearing in the presence of a lady, and it is said that he did it to a queen's taste, and that, too, without one word of abuse. He did it in a sort of an off-hand, matter-of-factly, business-like way. But he is not a fighter, far from it. He is too generous. I could tell of numerous little deeds of heroism that are his, but it is useless for I believe the Sparrow will agree with me that my hero has all the qualities of a true hero. He is good, and in as much as he is good he is great, and all great men are heroes. Candidly do you not believe my hero could have won the battle of Manila had he been trained in the navy? Do you not believe that he would today be wearing the laurels of a Lee, a Jackson, or a Grant had he occupied a place like theirs during the rebellion of the States? As to winning the applause of his fellows, my hero is indifferent, and for this reason he may never have a page in the histories of the world, but down deep in my hero's soul burns the spark of heroism, and an opportunity is all that is necessary to make it flame so that all the world can see it. As to dress, he is also indifferent, though he is usually in neat attire, but many a time I have seen him in overalls with soiled hands. I notice that he prefers a dark necktie to one of a bright red color. I am not in love with my hero, but should Cupid ever lead me out among the roses and blossoms in the Paradise of Love, I should not object did I find my hero there.

Sincerely,
VIOLET.

In next week's issue of The Sun I expect to print letters from your young man, answering the question of "What constitutes your ideal woman? And do you look upon any young woman as a heroine?"

THE SPARROW.

THE OWL.

Oak Tree, near Pleasant Grove, Saturday, Jan. 7, 1905.—Editor Sun: I am unable to send in my letters this week. I am all torn up; most of my feathers are gone, and my left wing is sprained, both eyes are bruised up, and three claws on my left foot are missing. A young man in Springfield is the guilty party. The attack was premeditated, cold blooded, murderous and without provocation. The Sparrow tells me that this young fellow is blowing about what he did to me. Very well, let him blow—he has an abundance of breath, but let him remember that The Owl will be after him pretty soon with eyes and ears wide open, and I expect to make it so warm for him he'll be compelled to fan himself through the remainder of January.

Yours truly,
The Owl.

MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME

Mr. M. F. Hetherington, who was formerly engaged in the newspaper business at Lebanon, but who for the past three or four years has been connected with the Metropolis Publishing Co., at Miami, Fla., recently disposed of his interest in the business and will return to Lebanon in the Spring to again engage in the newspaper business. M. B. B. Tatum, one of the editors of the Metropolis, says in part:

"For several years Mr. Hetherington has given his time wholly and untiringly to the work of aiding in making the Metropolis what it is today, one of the best and most influential in Florida and the Miami Publishing Company one of the best paying properties of the kind in the State. During this time Mr. Hetherington has not only proved himself to be a newspaper man of rare and exceptional ability, but what is rarer--an honest man, with all the instincts and characteristics of the gentleman under all circumstances; an agreeable and competent associate; a true and sympathetic friend. Were it possible to pay higher tribute than this I would crave the power."

Mr. Hetherington's friends in Kentucky are glad that he is coming back to them. We were all sure that he would soon grow weary of the orange blossoms and sunshine of Florida. They become too monotonous. Here in Kentucky we can throw snowballs to-day and go fishing to-morrow, wear furs in the morning and shirt-waists in the afternoon. We have queens in cabins, horse-pistols in hip pockets, wines in the running brooks and good in everything. (They haven't got 'em in Florida.) To a Kentuckian the Old Kentucky Home looms up like a ten-dollar gold piece in the palm of a pauper. It matters not where he is, it matters not what the season may be, he sees in memory the green vine o'er the door, the wild rose by the garden gate, the Ben Davis apple tree in the orchard, and beholds the laughing faces of a thousand old friends, and--if he is not in the penitentiary he's coming back. He won't stay away, he can't stay away. There's a sort of a something behind him pushing him back toward the Kentucky shore. When you have been away from home, did you ever go out into the open and let the eye measure to that spot in the blue skies where you think home ought to be? If you ever did, we'll wager you have seen a pretty hand in a bank of lilies beckoning you. And hardly before you know what you are doing you've got your satchel packed, and bought a ham-sandwich and railroad ticket. A Kentucky friend of ours once went to southern California to spend the winter, and one day when he and a party of friends were out drinking in the myriads of beauties which Providence so lavishly bestowed upon that land, he was asked by a friend, as they were driving by a fruit forest, with its thousands of blooming trees, if that were not about the prettiest sight he had ever seen. He emphatically replied "no!" "What have you ever seen that is prettier," his friend asked. "A thorn tree and a huckle-berry bush upon a hillside in Kentucky," he replied.

Since Congressman D. H. Smith announced that he would not again be candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district, the Hon. T. Scott Mayes, of this place, is being urged by his friends to enter the race. They believe that Mr. Mayes can win the nomination and are anxious that he announce his candidacy. He is strong in nearly every county in the district, and it is believed, that he can go into a convention with the instructions of at least six counties. Mr. Mayes would make a superb Congressman and the Democrats of the Fourth district would make no mistake in giving him the nomination. He may be persuaded to enter the race, and if he does his friends feel that he is going to come out of it with the laurels.

Hope! That's the prettiest word in our vocabulary. It's a sort of an engine to the soul, pulling the heart out of a world of night into an Eden of roses. But here's a moral for you: Hope never knocked a pessimism; it takes a long pole and elbow rease to do this. Hope never tunneled a hill--brawn behind a pick and shovel cut the hole through the mountain. Hope can ride ten million miles in the twinkling of an eye and rest in the light of a star, but she can't nail boards on a barn roof, dig a post hole or buy a pair of "galluses." And that's where the rub comes in.

Andrew Carnegie has written a letter to Mayor Grainger, of Louisville, promising the city another $200,000 for libraries. Mr. Carnegie still has that terrible dread of dying rich. 'Tis a horrible thing when you think about it.

A. Lewis, a white man in Mississippi, was given forty lashes on the naked back and ordered to leave the State for insulting a woman. The forty lashes ought to have been supplimented. It was a mistake in ordering him to leave the State, because the scamp will have to "locate."

S. G. Reddicks, a prosperous farmer of near Springfield, and Miss Effie Tatum, of this place, surprised their many friends on last Wednesday by driving to Springfield and having the vows of matrimony solemnized by Rev. NEWS NOTES

From Washington City.—Bunched Items That Will Interest the Reader.

[Special Correspondence.]

The past calendar year has brought the biggest twelve months' business in the patent office of any year in the history of the organization, it is estimated by those in authority. The work of making up the preliminary figures for the annual report of the commissioner of patents for the calendar year is going on now, and it is understood that the force of the examiners' division of the office is far behind in its work. This is the division on which falls the burden of the work connected with the issuance of patents and the examination of patent rights, and the fact that the division is so far behind at this time of the year is taken as an indication that the inventors of the country have been unusually busy.

Medals of Honor.
The secretary of war has arranged with a Philadelphia firm for the manufacture of 3,000 medals of honor of the new design recently adopted by the department, which are to be distributed for the old style medals now in the possession of about 2,500 heroes of American wars. These medals will cost about $2 apiece, and there is about $12,000 available for the purchase of such medals. The new medal is a gold plated star with a central enamel wreath design, the top of which is surmounted by a laurel wreath. The medal is suspended from a long blue ribbon designed to be worn around the neck beneath the coat so as to display the medal over the chest.

The Consular Service.
Austin A. Burnham, general secretary of the National Business directory, Chicago, had a conference recently with President Roosevelt. The proposed reorganization of the consular service along the lines of the original Lodge bill was considered in detail. The president expressed himself as heartily in accord with the efforts of the league and the commercial organizations of the country to organize the consular service on a basis which will make that branch of the government service more effective in extending our commerce in the markets of the world. Experimentally the president favors placing the system of examination of consular positions in the hands of the civil service commission and is of opinion that until that plan is thoroughly tested it would not be advisable to try a competitive system of examination.

Tom Reed's Old Friend.
James W. Buck of Portland, Me., seventy-five years old and declaring that he expects to live to be a hundred or more, paid his respects to the president the other day, having been presented by Representative Allen of Maine. Buck knew Tom Reed when the latter was a boy in college, and they were always warm friends. Aside from his own personality, Buck has a number of things "Buck" showed the president was a "Buck" Swiss watch, the only one of its kind in this country now, that weighs one pound and nine ounces. It not only records the hours, minutes and seconds, but the month of the year, day of the month and day of the week. It likewise presents the phases of the moon strictly according to the evolutions of that luminary.

New York.
President Roosevelt has received William D. Murphy of New York that he would accept the invitation extended to

The Farm and Other Matters

As Discussed By J. S. TRIGG.

THE TREE PEDDLER UNUSUAL.

There is probably a greater variation in the prices paid for nursery stock than almost any other thing which farmers buy. It comes about in this way: The growers of such stock have a tolerably uniform scale of prices and a reasonable one, but many of them depend upon selling their stock by agents, and as these agents almost always work on a commission, in most cases no fruit is placed upon the prices they will make the farmer pay, provided he can be worked through his ignorance of real values. We have repeatedly known of cases where farmers were misled in the most outrageous way in buying trees of agents paying 75 cents each for apple trees which the very firm or individual they were working for quoted in its catalogue at 10 to 15 cents; a dollar each for plum and cherry trees the catalogue price of which was 25 cents. But this is not the worst of this commission agency manner of selling trees. The agent has to be a smooth tongued fellow, probably knowing as little in a practical way about fruit and fruit growing as the farmer's goldfish, and so, ignorantly or maliciously, talks the farmer into buying varieties of fruit wholly unsuited to his locality, which invariably ends in disappointment. The more the agent can sell the bigger his commission, and we have never yet known of a case where a farmer would refuse to do the order, no matter how unfit the varieties ordered might be for the locality of the man ordering. We have seen a farmer who said to him here, that the only safe way in buying fruit trees is to deal with some reliable firm direct, for this is the only way to insure a fair price and satisfaction in the filling of the order. One-fourth of the money worse than wasted in buying trees of agents properly invested direct with reliable nurserymen would place good orchards all over the country.

GOOD TIMES.

We are asked what the business prospects are for this country for the next four years. Will the times be good? Good times is very general term, and people's ideas differ as to what constitutes such good times. With some it is a wave of intoxicated and riotous speculation, when values of all commodities are inflated—a sort of financial drunk which is invariably followed by a financial headache. We do not look for and do not wish to see any good times of this sort for the American people have learned some lessons well and today possess more financial horse sense than they ever did before. But we do look to see a continuance of a conservative and healthful prosperity, such demand for labor, such prices for agricultural and manufactured commodities as will bring profit to the laborer and producer. We look for abundant and cheap money, the enlargement of markets for our surplus products and increasingly profitable relations with the world at large. American farmers are now on a sound basis, there are no vexing and distracting issues for the people to scrap over, while the opportunities for individual and national development and progress have never been better. It is a grand time in which to live, and the United States is also the best country in which to live. All the same, it is going to be just as hard for the lazy and shiftless man, the dishonest man and the man who has neither the sense nor the ability to improve his opportunities as it ever was. The best policy for the average man is to work as hard and as intelligently as he can, to keep his head and to be content with small profits and safe investments. If this course is pursued we shall have four years of first rate good times.

NOT FOR JANE.

An agent engaged in selling a really valuable and labor saving device for the housewife told us recently that it was surprising the number of men there were who would procure every latest invention which would lighten their work on the farm, but who at the same time refused to invest a dollar for the benefit of their wives in the home. He said that at one place where he called the woman was carrying water a distance of eight rods from a well in two trips, and he was to work a lot of hops, while the old man was in the field near by riding a sulky plow and snoring and smoking round after round. This particular old brute said that his wife did not need any newfangled notions; that she had always got along without them, and he reckoned she always would. This man must have a doctor's bill to pay some day the amount of which would have been completely equipped her with labor saving devices around the house and spared her life.

AN AMERICAN PRIVILEGE.

We think there are some men who consider it a privilege to be faked and fooled—at least at one of the rights they enjoy as to what American citizens. We know of one good man who has fallen a victim to the wiles of sundry cloth peddlers, patent right swindlers, and other low-down fellows. He has died four different times, each time at a cost of $50 for experience and acquaintance with nice talking gentlemen and to wind up he has got caught for a note of $200 by a fake doctor who proposed to cure him of a disease which he thought he had, but hadn't. Yet when friends suggested that he would do well to let this crowd alone be turned them down by telling them that he earned his money and had the right to do as he pleased with it.

THE MANY LIVED GOD

[Copyright, 1904, by K. M. Whitehead.]
Two paths wound their tortuous ways about the hill and came out finally on a small rocky shelf. The place commanded an excellent view of the level valley and the river twisting and turning in a shimmering course many feet below. Far across the valley on the other side of the river the pine covered slopes made a cool, green vista in the July sunshine.

The man toiled slowly up one of these paths, pausing occasionally to rest his perspiring brow and to curse deeply the blackberry vines which now and again entwined their troublesome fingers about his ankles. The girl came up the other path, holding a fluffy parasol in so spiritless a fashion that the sun streamed full up on her brown head.

The man reached the rocky shelf first and seated himself on the very edge, with his legs dangling over the brink. A few moments later the girl arrived on the scene, surveyed the man's broad back a moment and then said, half in annoyance, half in embarrassment, "Oh."

"The man turned about, behind the intruder and with a cough—the masculine haven of refuge at such a time—resumed his stargazing of the green tints in the valley below. The girl looked irresolutely at the man and with equal irresolution at the path she had just quitted. A few moments later the girl arrived on the scene, surveyed the man's broad back a moment and then said, half in annoyance, half in embarrassment, "Oh."

"The man turned slowly. "You seem to voice my own ideas," he said. "Why don't you leave, then?" she asked. "I'm not leaving," he said. "Because," said he, "I wish to be here. Besides, this is my poodle. I found it first." The girl's eyes narrowed and she pursed her lips. "This particular note is of my discovering, kindly remember," said she. "The girl's eyes looked across the valley to the rugged line of hills, over which fleecy bits of white clouds drifted lazily. Her parasol was tapping nervously on an exposed rock.

drawn to the scene of his crime, by some horrible fascination, I suppose," he explained. "The girl smiled grimly. "You admit it was a crime, then?" "Men culpa, mea culpa," he said; "yet when I reflect on the enormity of the crime, I am almost tempted to repent."

"She frowned. "It's scarcely humorous," she chided. "It is tragic," he declared. He turned to her suddenly and his face was grave. "Why did you come?" he asked. "I wanted to be—to be a man with my dead," she said, almost listlessly. He straightened up. His tone was eager. "You're sure it's dead?" he asked. "Quite sure," she said. "As a number or you're decidedly certain?" "As you are," she said. "It isn't stunned or shamming? Are you certain it won't come to life again?" "The girl sighed. "It is dead—stone dead," she said, with a touch of sadness in her voice.

"The man looked at her, marked, "There had as many lives as a cat—that one might cruelly maltreat it and yet it would survive." "There is a limit to all things—even the forbearance of love," she said. "The man swung his legs over the brink, and his brow was drawn into a puzzled frown.

"I'm terribly afraid there's a spark of life left," said he. "It would be frightful to bury the poor chap alive. It seems to me we should try resuscitation first." "I'm afraid it's too late," she said coldly. "It is far easier to destroy than to resurrect."

"Quite so, quite so," said he meekly. "Oh, I say," he burst out contritely. "You don't really mean it's all over, do you? You'll never see that miserable bit of yesterday morning end everything, do you?" "The girl arose. "You mean you're to be alone," she said. "It is evident I must seek solitude somewhere else."

BARRY PRESTON.

How to Have New Shoes Fitted.

"People who buy ready made shoes would find their footgear much more comfortable if only they would stand up instead of sitting down to be fitted," said an experienced salesman. "Nine out of ten customers, especially women, want to sit in a comfortable chair all the time they are fitting shoes, and it is with difficulty that one can get them to stand a few minutes even when the shoe is fitted. Then when they begin to walk about a little they wonder why the shoe is less easy than when it was first tried on. The fact is, the foot is smaller when sitting than when one is walking about. Exercise brings a larger quantity of blood to the feet, and they swell. The muscles, too, require a certain amount of room. In buying shoes this must be borne in mind or one cannot hope to be shoe comfortably."

LAND, STOCK And CROP.

At public sales are seen so many old horses sold for young ones that he who can tell their age feels no little sympathy for a neighbor who buys a four-year-old combined and pays a six-year-old price for it. Nearly every one can tell a very old horse from a very young one. Frequently one sees a sleek, fat, high light animal passing from general appearance for a five or six year old that is fully twice as old.

The lower front teeth, if healthy and natural, are practical guides. A yearling has very short teeth, with deep cups in the center, the two end ones being shorter than the others.

A two-year-old has short teeth, with comparatively shallow cups. A three-year-old has two long teeth in the center, with two short or "coll" teeth on either side.

A four-year-old has four long teeth, with one short one on either side.

A five-year-old has six long teeth, with deep cups in centers.

A six-year-old has shallow cups in the two center teeth.

A seven-year-old has the center teeth worn nearly smooth, cups of second pair shallow.

An eight-year-old has the second pair worn even smoother.

A ten-year-old is commonly spoken of as a "smooth mouthed horse"—i. e., no cups. As the animal grows older the teeth become worn in proportion and the corners of the end teeth become rounded.

To tell the age with any degree of accuracy beyond twelve requires much experience and the examination of many sets of teeth.

If the 1904 crops were equally divided every man, woman and child in the United States would receive one barrel of flour, 200 eggs, 140 quarts of milk, more than half of which goes into butter; one bushel of apples and two and a half bushels of potatoes and two bushels of carrots, beets, parsnips and turnips, eleven heads of cabbage and half as much lettuce, cucumbers and cauliflower, twenty-eight bushels of corn, usually in the shape of beef, pork and poultry, besides seventy pounds of cotton, six pounds of wool for clothes and enough leather for two pairs of shoes. These raw materials at present wholesale prices would sell for about $50. The size of the average American family is five and a quarter, which would make the family share of last year's crop cost $292. The bare necessities of life do not cost so very much. What counts for more in the total of expenditures are luxuries that have become necessities and often luxuries that might better be done without.

How to Break Glass Easily.

If you want to break off a glass jar or bottle quickly evenly soak a piece of string in turpentine and tie it around the glass where you wish the break to come. Then fill the glass up to the point with cold water and set fire to the string. The glass will snap all along the heated line. By breaking off the top of a broken decanter it may, if the base is intact, be converted into a sugar bowl or fruit dish.

How to Test Celluloid.

Here is a good way of testing so called ivory to see if it is really ivory or only celluloid. Celluloid compounds can be detected by rubbing briskly against a woolen material, such as a coat sleeve, until slightly warm. Under these conditions they give off a distinct smell of camphor.

How to Prepare an Easy Dessert.

A cup of coarsely chopped hickory nuts or English walnuts added to pint of whipped cream, sweetened and poured over a dozen lady fingers, makes a toothsome and acceptable dessert.

Pardon the above Shakespearean words, but they fit in so well that I am constrained to use them. They tell the whole story—a sort of continued story, in four words. Everything will be just Nineteen Hundred and Five Smokes for the Year.

When your dwelling house or business house "goes up in smoke" certainly you do not enjoy it. This sort of smoking is too expensive; often very dangerous. Some times a little "puff of smoke" will cause people in crowded homes to stampede like herds of Texas steers, crushing one another in the pell-mell effort to get away from the little "puff of smoke." That sort of "smoke" is something that they do not appreciate. But there are hundreds and hundreds of people who do enjoy a "smoke"—THE SMOKE OF A LAKE CIGAR. Try one, and you'll get a quarter's worth next time. How would something like this suit you? Smoke five every week day, six every Sunday, and 28 during Christmas week, and the total will be.....

NEW SHORT STORIES

Hased a Graduate.

Jesse Lynch Williams, who has written some delightful stories of student life at Princeton and who has lived there since his graduation from the university, is a very youthful looking man, with a frank, boyish face and slender figure that do not betray the dignified paternity of three fine boys, says the New York Times. Early in the autumn, just after college had

"DON'T YOU KNOW AN OLD GRAB?" opened, he was crossing the campus one morning when a party of sophomores suddenly surrounded him. "Stop," commanded one. Mr. Williams stopped. "Take off that hat," said another. The hat came off. "What do you mean by wearing a stiff hat here?" demanded another. "Put it down!" "The hat was laid aside. "Now walk over to that tree and stand there till we tell you to—"

But the hazing got no further, for an older student came along just then and recognized Mr. Williams. "What the deuce do you fellows mean?" he asked. "Don't you know an old grab when you see one?" And the wise sophos melted among the trees in the heat of their youthful passions.

Throw Away His Ten.

Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia tells of an encounter that took place between an old grad when you see one? And the wise sophos melted among the trees in the heat of their youthful passions.

The advocate of temperance thereupon stepped in his walk and engaged the man in conversation. He pictured the misery that resulted from the bottle and earnestly begged the laborer to forego the consumption of its contents. So fervently did Mr. Swallow put the case that the man was much impressed and in response to his urgent request broke the bottle upon the ground. As a reward the temperance advocate gave the good man a quarter where-with to "buy something better to drink."

The man went off, and to the great dismay and disgust of the doctor immediately entered a saloon. When he had come out the doctor again accosted him, asking why he had spent the money for drink. "Well, me good sir," replied the laborer, "I thought it was drink I wanted me to buy, for the stuff that I threw away was cold tea."—New York Tribune.

Dodging the Pledge.

Mrs. C. A. Harvise, president of the "Boys' Welcome" Unit association of Brooklyn, is an enthusiastic advocate of temperance. The other day apropos of hypocrisy in the temperance movement she said:

"I hope there are not many of us to whom the spirit of temperance pledge means as little as it did to a certain Scottish woman."

"This woman had made a vow not to drink liquor, and a day or two after the vow she supped at a friend's house."

"In those days temperance was not common in Scotland, and at the supper wine was passed about like tea."

"The new temperance convert looked at the wine longingly. Her hostess said:

"I'm sorry ye canna drink a glass o' wine w' us o' account o' yer temperance principles."

"The other had just taken up her plate a piece of cake. She said thoughtfully, extending her plate toward the wine bottle, 'Aweel, just put it on my cake, and I'll eat it.'—(Cincinnati Enquirer.

Case to Be Thankful.

Mr. Chouteau, ambassador of the United States at London, tells of the address made by an Irish officer to his men who had just returned from a fruitless expedition.

Referring to his feet with the utmost solemnity and seriousness, the officer said:

"My men, I am fully aware of the fact that many of you brave fellows are disappointed because in this campaign you were afforded little opportunity to fight, but my brave boys, reflect upon this, that had there been any fighting there would have been many absent faces here today!"

How to Make a Completion Balm.

Half a pint of alcohol, two ounces of spirits of camphor, two ounces of spirits of ammonia and five ounces of water, to be added to sufficient boiling water to make a quart in all, when the mixture should be well rubbed into the skin daily, is said to be especially efficacious in taking the fatigue out of tired muscles.

How to Prepare Hot Sand Bags.

We are all acquainted with the virtues of the hot water bag, but many persons are not aware of the fact that a sand bag is even better, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. The way to prepare it is this: Get some clean, fine sand and dry thoroughly in a kettle on the stove; make a bag about eight inches square of flannel, fill it with the sand and sew the bag with cotton or linen cloth. The sand should be well rubbed into the skin daily, and also enable the person using it to warm it in the oven or on top of the stove. After once using this further recourse will be had to the hot water bag.
